The Conversion of Paul/The Third Sunday of Epiphany

Did St Paul convert from Judaism to Christianity (as the name of today's feast day suggests), or did he make a different sort of change in his life? The three versions of the Damascus Road story in the Book of Acts (in chapters 9, 22, and 26) certainly suggest a dramatic change in direction, but if we read the New Testament carefully, many details imply that his new faith didn't abandon his former life in Judaism, but that he perceived a twist which nonetheless remained true (from his point of view) to the broad stream of Israel's religion.

When people assail our Jewish neighbours with accusations based in conspiracy theories and bigotry, we should keep in mind that although Paul changed his mind about whether Gentiles might be admitted to the people of God, he never repudiated the Torah ('the Law is holy, and the commandment is holy and just and good'; Rom 7:12), nor the people of Israel ('They are Israelites, and to them belong the adoption, the glory, the covenants, the giving of the Law, the worship, and the promises; to them belong the patriarchs, and from them, according to the flesh, comes the Anointed One, who is over all, God blessed forever'; Rom 9:4f). Israel is God's firstborn; we are adopted into God's family. Israel is the trunk and the roots; we have been grafted into the branches.

As we have observed the Week of Prayer for Christian Unity, we do well to work also for reconciliation among Christians and Jews. We have a long history with many shameful chapters for which we need to repent, to seek to make things right — to show the world our gratitude for God's grace shown to us in Christ Jesus.
