The Fourth Sunday of Epiphany

Candlemass

Candlemas, oddly, is not a single feast at all. That is to say, it partly corresponds to post-partum purification of Mary in the Temple, in accordance with the Law (Leviticus 19); and partly to the redemption of the first-born son (described in Exodus 13). St Luke tells this story with a view to ensuring that we understand that not only Zechariah and Elizabeth, but also Joseph and Mary were observant Jews, 'living blamelessly according to all the commandments and regulations of the Lord' (Lk 1:6).

The liturgical feast also commemorates the prophecies we read about in the day's Gospel readings. Simeon sees the babe in arms and proclaims the Nunc dimittis ('Now, dismiss...') which pronounces the double blessing of Jesus, 'a light for revelation to the Gentiles, and glory for your people Israel'. He added that some of Israel would rise, and some would fall, depending on their open or secret response to Jesus. Mary, too, would experience the utmost desolation: 'a sword will pierce your own heart, too.' Then Anna, who had been waiting in the Temple for just this day went about telling everyone who, like her, had been waiting for the redemption of Israel about Jesus.

As is the case with many observances, this holy day attracted other traditions and significances. We should notice that Candlemas comes roughly halfway between the shortest day in winter, and the spring day when night and day are equal length. The blessing of candles for use in the rest of the year became common, and these are especially used, two crossed and placed against the worshippers' throats on 3 February, the feast of St Blaise (insert your own 'blaze' joke here).

So, many festal meanings and traditions converge on this Feast of the Presentation, or the Purification, in honour of Jesus, the Light of the Gentiles and the Glory of Israel, with candles that honour the Blessed Virgin Mary and that may be used to bless throats, and revel in the multifarious splendours of this multiply-blessed holy day!
